WINDOW CONDENSATION FACTS AND TIPS

Condensation on your glass surface is not a warranty claim. It is a normal process that can be controlled by the homeowner.

Is your glass "sweating" or is water beading or ice forming on the inside surface of your windows? There's a good chance that what you are seeing is condensation, a sign that there's excess humidity in your home.

THE CAUSE: Indoor moisture is caused by a variety of factors, including cooking, showering, running dishwashers, storing firewood, pets, fish tanks, plants, clothes dryers, furnace humidifiers and even breathing.

Simply put, when warm moist air comes in contact with a cold surface, condensation has an opportunity to form on the surface. The higher the humidity level in your home, the more likely you may experience condensation on your window or door products. The humidity level that should be maintained in your home varies with the outside temperature. The colder it is outside, the lower the humidity level should be inside your home. The following is a guideline to follow:

Outside Temp	Relative Humidity
-20 Degrees	15% or Less
-10 Degrees	15% to 20%
0 Degrees	20% to 25%
+10 Degrees	25% to 30%
+20 Degrees	30% to 35%

If there is moisture between the glass surfaces, you have a seal failure.
